Saffian was born in Iran in 1969, during a time of great political upheaval. Her father was a doctor, and her mother was a teacher. Saffian's family was well-off, and she had a happy childhood. However, in 1979, the Iranian Revolution changed everything. Saffian's father was arrested and imprisoned, and her family was forced to flee the country.

Saffian and her family arrived in the United States as refugees in 1980. They settled in Los Angeles, and Saffian began attending school. She quickly learned English and excelled in her studies. However, she also faced discrimination and prejudice from some of her classmates. Saffian persevered, and she eventually went on to college and graduate school. She became a successful businesswoman and a respected member of her community.

In her memoir, Saffian shares her personal experiences as an immigrant in America. She writes about the challenges she faced, the discrimination she experienced, and the hope and resilience that helped her to overcome adversity. Saffian's story is a powerful reminder of the American dream, and it is a must-read for anyone who has ever wondered what it means to be an American.
