A Harrowing Account of the Climate Crisis

Klein's book is full of heartbreaking stories of the people who are already being forced to adapt to the changing climate. She tells the story of a family in Bangladesh who lost their home to rising sea levels, and of a farmer in Kenya who has seen his crops fail due to drought. She also tells the story of a community in the United States that is being forced to relocate due to wildfires.

These stories are difficult to read, but they are important. They show the human face of the climate crisis and the devastating impacts it is having on people all over the world.

These stories are inspiring. They show that even in the face of the climate crisis, there is hope. People are taking action to protect their communities and to fight for a better future.

A Call to Action

Klein's book is a call to action. She argues that we need to take urgent action to address the climate crisis. She calls for a transition to a clean energy economy, for investments in renewable energy and energy efficiency, and for a halt to the construction of new fossil fuel infrastructure.
